J. H. Blecher, representing the Missouri River Packet Company, is in this city for the purpose of interesting the people of Lexington in the new enterprise. He says that within three weeks the company expects to have two more boats in service and in the spring it is hoped to have enough boats to insure daily service. As an illustration of new business developed by the boat line, Mr. Blecher mentions a contract with the White Bros., of near Waverly for the transportation of cottonwood for the manufacture of excelsior. A large load with this can be transported by water with large profit at $100. The freight on the same quantity by rail is $400. The barges can be landed near the stump, while railroad transportation requires a haul by wagon of two or three miles over bad roads.

THE HOME COOK BOOK.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church, who six years ago issued the "Home Cook Book," are getting out a new edition of this interesting manual revised and enlarged. The recipes of this book have been tested in the experience of the good housewives of Lexington and vicinity, who have contributed to its pages the benefit of successful personal experience. Those who have attained a local reputation for the preparation of particular dishes have been solicited to give accurate recipes based upon successful experience; and for this reason the previous edition of this book was quickly exhausted, the recipes having been found to be more trustworthy than those in most manuals on this subject.

While the prime object of the ladies in getting out the book is to raise money for church purposes, the most important result may prove to be something very different. These recipes may come to have something of a memorial character. For instance, the very first recipe in the book, for light bread, was given by a good woman of blessed memory who cured hundreds of people of an inveterate prejudice against all forms of bread, except hot biscuits and flannel cakes, by the preparation of a kind of light bread so delicious and wholesome that no sane woman has a right to be offended at her husband for dwelling in eloquent reminiscences on the light bread that "Gran" used to make." The book contains hundreds of recipes suggested in the same way and gathered by these good women who have tested each other's cookery and know where special merit has been found.

HISTORIC ROCK MUST GO.

An interesting historical monument near Ulm, on the Danube, is threatened with destruction—to wit, the rock on which Napoleon stood on October 20, 1805, and watched the capitulation of the Austrian Field Marshal Mack. The conqueror met Mack on the rock, and told him to remain his sovereign, that all empires must have an end. For a hundred years the historic rock has been decorated with a tablet in memory of the event. It is now to be blown up to make room for an extension of Ulm goods station.

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

Jonah had been thrown over the side of the ship and the big fish had taken him in.

"I wouldn't mind it so much," he reflected in his cramped and uncomfortable quarters, "but I had paid for first-class passage."

Deeming it necessary, however, to close the incident in the conventional manner, he consoled himself by reflecting that the weather conditions wouldn't make any difference during the remainder of the trip, so far as he was personally concerned.—Chicago Tribune.

ANXIOUS TO MAKE MONEY.

A Bennington (Vt.) boy who is noted for his desire to make money met a gentleman on the street some time since, and inquired: "Mr. T., may I drive you cow to pasture this summer?"

"You may," replied Mr. T.—"And may I drive her next summer?"

"I think so," answered Mr. T.—"Well, if you're alive, and I'm alive, and the cow is alive, may I drive her the summer after next?"
